The National Register of Historic Places has been accepting multiple property nominations since 1977. To date, over one third of the 66,300 National Register listings are part of multiple property submissions. The National Register multiple property nomination is designed to be a flexible tool for recording written statements of historic context and associated property types and to provide a framework for evaluating the significance of a related group of historic properties. The statement of historic context is a written narrative that describes the unifying thematic framework; it must be developed in sufficient depth to support the history, the relationships, and the importance of the properties to be considered. A property type is a grouping of individual properties characterized by common physical and/or associative attributes. Property types tie the historic context to specific historic properties, so that National Register eligibility can be assessed.

Multiple Property Submissions (MPS) streamline registration because the cover forms contain much of the context for evaluation, which does not have to be repeated in individual nominations submitted as part of the group. This approach also facilitates evaluations of significance for related resources.

Because so much outstanding work has been done to compile these cover documents, the National Register multiple property files now contain a treasure house of information that is available to the public. In addition, the multiple property documents in the National Register collection contain much information that is useful for evaluating similar resources in other geographical areas. For example, the MPS of Carnegie Libraries in Illinois and California, or Usonian Houses by Frank Lloyd Wright, 1945-1960, in Iowa, contain valuable information that can be used in other states.

Many cover documents are worthy of publication. The National Park Service encourages nominating authorities and others to seek ways to have them published for scholars and the public to use. The information contained in them can also be used in developing travel itineraries, World Wide Web sites, for walking tours, interpretative projects, and other public education initiatives.

National Register Bulletin 16B: How to Complete the National Register Multiple Property Documentation Form (issued in 1991) explains in detail how to nominate groups of related significant properties to the National Register. A video, The Multiple Property Approach, has been produced by the National Register. Duplicate copies of multiple property nominations on file at the National Register and copies of the video may be ordered by writing, calling, or emailing the National Register reference desk.

National Register of Historic Places
Multiple Nominations
Listed Through October 2, 1996

TR = Thematic Resource
MRA = Multiple Resource Area
MPS = Multiple Property Submission

TR (Thematic Resources) and MRA (Multiple Resource Area) were the terms used for multiple property submissions until 1991 when National Register Bulletin 16B was published. MPS (Multiple Property Submission) is the term used since the publication of the bulletin.
